AMUSEMENTS.

—Mr. Robert B. Mantell, the world renowned romantic actor will appear at the Grand Opera House, Sept. 18th, matinee and night. Every heart has its chord of romance, and when its harp strings are swept by a monster hand it surely must respond. What is more touching than the sight of youth mourning over its dead love, a mother weeping out her soul in grieving for an absent child, strong manhood bowed down over the loss of all that makes life life. And what more joyful to witness than the heart reborn, the life reborn in a glorious sunset of love, resurrected after a morning of terror, a noonday of gloom. Such is the story of "The Light of Other Days." It is a wonderful picture, dark in its depths and golden in its relief. "The Light of Other Days" is a romance, pure and simple, and as played by Robert B. Mantell, accompanied by Miss Marie Booth Russell, and his company, it seems a reality which appeals alike to the heart, the senses and the intellect.

—D. C. Wiggins has made arrangements with Robert B. Mantell to play a special matinee on Friday afternoon, September 18. The curtain will not rise until 8 o'clock, in order to give teachers and school children a chance to see this famous actor. Special trains will be run from all surrounding towns. Trains will leave at 12 o'clock after the night performance.

NEW MANAGEMENT.—Mr. Carl Crawford has leased the neat little barber shop located at the Fordham Hotel and has placed Mr. Sam'l Link in charge of same. Mr. Link is a first-class barber and can always be found at the shop ready to wait on his trade. tf

THE POSTAL CASES.

Seven Indictments Returned, Involving Six Persons.

Voluminous Evidence Was Laid Before the Grand Jury as the Result of the Inquiry Which Commenced Last March.

Washington, Sept. 9.—After deliberating for several weeks over a mass of documents submitted by the post office inspectors the federal grand jury in this city Tuesday returned seven indictments in postal cases, involving six different persons. All the indictments were kept off the public record and both the officials of the district attorney's office and of the post office department refused to discuss names or details of the indictments until the parties indicted are arrested. The identity of the indicted individuals this far was left a matter of conjecture. It is expected that arrests will occur Wednesday and that the post office department will have some announcement to make during the forenoon. The grand jury's action probably marks the beginning of the end of the investigations that have been in progress since the middle of last March. Voluminous evidence has been laid before the grand jury as the result of the inquiry and while the present report of the jury disposes of most of the cases, there yet remains several cases to be passed upon. When the latter are disposed of, according to Postmaster General Payne, the investigation so far as the work at Washington is concerned, will be at an end for all practical purposes. Several of the persons indicted Tuesday live outside of Washington. They will be arrested as soon as bench warrants can be served.

Leopold Stern, the Baltimore contractor, who disappeared from Baltimore before he could be arrested on an indictment returned July 31 last, was located at Toronto and the long delayed surrender of George W. Beavers, the former head of the salary and allowance division, to the New York authorities, took place. The postal officials have been searching for Stern ever since he disappeared and finally received word from the Canadian authorities that he is in Toronto. They expressed considerable vexation at the premature publication of his whereabouts on account of the problem of extradition that now confronts the government, and the possibility of his making good his escape, now that the information has become public in advance of the readiness of the authorities to effect his arrest. Beavers' arrest created no surprise, for the government all along has kept advised of his whereabouts despite reports to the contrary.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 9.—Mr. Stern declined to be seen when a reporter called at his home Tuesday. He referred all callers to his attorney. Mr. Stern's lawyer said that his client was ready to appear before an extradition judge and prove his innocence, which is interpreted as a declaration that extradition proceedings will be fought to the end. He will not leave the city, the attorney said, and if an extradition warrant is secured, Mr. Stern will at once leave for Washington.

M'KINLEY MONUMENT.

President Invited to Attend the Unveiling on Antietam Battlefield.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Maj. Joseph D. Cunningham, of Harrison county, Ohio, called on the president Tuesday to invite him to attend on October 13 the unveiling of a monument erected to the memory of the late President McKinley on the battlefield of Antietam. The monument is located on the spot where Maj. McKinley stopped to eat his supper on the night following the great battle. President Roosevelt was unable Tuesday to give a definite answer to the invitation, but promised Maj. Cunningham to let him know within a few days.

FOR FAR EASTERN SERVICE.

The French Government Has Requisitioned Several Steamers.

Paris, Sept. 9.—A dispatch from Marseilles to La Presse asserts that the government has requisitioned all the steamers on the far eastern service of Messageries Maritimes and Chargeurs Reunis companies for the conveyance of a large number of troops of all arms and a quantity of supplies. The dispatch adds that this step confirms the report that a critical situation prevails in China.

Death of Henry C. Delano.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 9.—Henry C. Delano, of Marshfield, Mass., died of paralysis here Tuesday while he was visiting his granddaughter, Mrs. M. W. Keeley. For 30 years he was employed by Daniel Webster and was the last to look on the great statesman's face, closing the lid on the coffin.

NEW CANAL TREATY.

The Stipulations in the Bill Now Before the Colombian Senate.

Bogota, Saturday, Sept. 5.—The bill which congress is now discussing authorizing President Marroquin to negotiate a new Panama canal treaty with the United States contains the following stipulations.

The perpetual use of the canal zone is granted provided that at the expiration of each hundred years the United States shall pay during the succeeding hundred years 25 per cent. more premium and rental than for the preceding term, the premium beginning at $400,000 and the rental at $400. The mixed tribunals in the canal zone shall try suits between foreigners or between Colombians and foreigners. The police and sanitary measures shall be practically in charge of the United States.

Twenty million dollars is fixed as the price of the concession besides the rental (sum?) of $10,000,000 payable by the canal company in consideration of Colombia's approval of the transfer of shares.

The railroad shall in 64 years revert to Colombia, but the United States may buy it under a valuation.

A term shall be fixed within which the canal must be begun, and finished.

The contract shall provide for a means to settle differences which may arise between the governments during the construction and execution of the contract.

KILLING OF COCKRILL.

Curtis Jett Will Be Placed on Trial Next Monday.

Cynthiana, Ky., Sept. 9.—When the case against Curtis Jett for the murder of Town Marshal Jim Cockrill, of Jackson, was called here Tuesday, the commonwealth answered ready, but asked a continuance of a day. None of the outside attorneys for the defense had arrived.

When Jett was brought in Attorney Blanton, for the defense, filed a demurrer, asking that the indictment be quashed. Commonwealth's Attorney Byrd objected to the demurrer, and asked that the case be tried at this time of court.

Judge Osborne overruled the special demurrer, and Attorney Blanton then filed affidavits supporting his motion to have the indictment quashed on the ground that this court had no jurisdiction to try the case, as the defendant had been tried and convicted at a special term of the court.

Judge Osborne did not think the grounds in the affidavit were sufficient for a postponement, and said the case would have to be tried at this term. He set it for next Monday, and ordered a special venire of jurymen from Robertson, Nicholas and Pendleton counties.

UNITED IRISH LEAGUE.

A Resolution Adopted Welcoming the Irish Land Bill.

Dublin, Sept. 9.—The national directory of the United Irish league held a meeting at Dublin Tuesday under the presidency of William Redmond, M. P. A resolution was adopted welcoming the Irish land bill as the most substantial victory gained by the Irish people for centuries, and ascribing this result to loyalty of Chief Irish Secretary Wyndham, the high public spirit of the liberal party and the good will of the landlords. Other resolutions urged the tenants to negotiate the purchase of their holdings in a spirit of friendliness.

LOWERED BEST PREVIOUS TIME.

Creseus Broke All Records For a Half Mile Track.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 9.—Creseus, the trotting stallion, driven by George H. Ketcham, his owner, broke all records for a half mile track Tuesday afternoon at the state fair grounds, lowering his own best previous time of two weeks ago at Dayton, O., a half second. He covered the mile Tuesday in 2:08 1/4. Creseus was accompanied by two runners and an automobile. The time by quarters was: :32; 1:04; 1:36 1/4; 2:08 1/4.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The recent arrival of another heir in the Peary household will prevent Mrs. Peary from accompanying her husband on the polar expedition, which he has planned to make next year.

THE NATIONAL TROPHY

The New York Rifle Team Won the Prize.

New Jersey, Which Had the Second Highest Score in the Shoot, Will Receive the Hilton Trophy and $300.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 10.—The name of the first winner to be engraved on the national rifle shooting trophy, provided by the congress of the United States, will be that of New York. In a spirited competition in progress two full days the New York team of 12 uniformed men captured the trophy handily, finishing with a lead of 86 points over its nearest competitor, New Jersey. New York's total was 2,988 out of a possible 3,600. In addition to the national trophy, valued at $1,000, which will be held by the winning team only one year, the New York team won a cash prize of $500.

New Jersey, which scored the second highest aggregate total of 2,902, receives the Hilton trophy, to be held one year, and $300.

Massachusetts was third, with a total of 2,888, and will carry home the "Soldier of Marathon" trophy, to be held one year, and $200.

The District of Columbia, fourth, with a total of 2,873, receives $150; Ohio, fifth, with a total of 2,788, receives $100, and the United States marine corps, sixth, with a total of 2,772, receives $50.

A medal will also be presented to each of the 12 members of each of the six winning teams.

Massachusetts entered a protest against New Jersey, asserting that Hudson, of New Jersey, was a regularly enlisted member of the Ninth New York regiment. Maj. Guilfoyle, executive officer, held that the protest must be passed on by the board appointed by the secretary of war.

Not once during the day did the sun show itself through the leaden clouds. Although overcoats were worn generally and the air was damp, the conditions for firing were fairly good.

The national trophy match will be shot next year in the middle west, probably at St. Louis.

By far the best work of Tuesday was that of Private Wilson, of the Georgia team. He was the last man to shoot and in almost total darkness succeeded in attaining a total of 42 out of a possible 50 at 800 yards. Dardinger, of New York, and Mr. Smith and Lieut. Benedict, of Ohio, each succeeded in scoring 49 out of a possible 50 at 500 yards. The cavalry team of the army is using the service carbine and therefore under the rules received an allowance of 12 points at 600 yards. The teams' actual score was 412, but the allowance raised it to 424.

MASTER BUILDERS' EXCHANGE.

A Systematic Warfare on Sympathetic Strikes to Be Made.

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—The advisory board of the Master Builders' Exchange Tuesday fixed January 1, 1904, as the date on which systematic warfare by means of lockouts against sympathetic strikes will begin. The builders' exchange represents practically all the builders and sub-contractors in the city. No workman will be employed after January 1, 1904, unless he is willing to agree not to engage in any sympathetic strike and to arbitrate any difference that may arise, work to continue meanwhile.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND.

She Jumped Into the River, Carrying Her Babe With Her.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 9.—The mystery surrounding the finding of the body of 5-year-old Viola Cordes in the Allegheny river last Sunday evening was partially cleared Tuesday evening by the finding of the body of the child's mother floating in the same stream. From all accounts it is believed that Mrs. Cordes, who was 24 years old, jumped into the river, carrying her child with her.

HAYES RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT.

The Appalachian National Park Association Met.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 9.—The Appalachian National Park association, the organization which is pushing the plan to have the government establish a forest reserve in the Southern Appalachian mountains, met in Asheville Tuesday and re-elected Rutherford B. Hayes president. The name of the organization was changed to the Appalachian Forest Reserve association.

Income of the Lehigh Valley Road.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The annual report of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. for the year ended June 30, which was issued Wednesday, showed the gross earnings and other income to have amounted to $27,259,427.

Retirement of Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Applications from national banks for the retirement of circulation are reaching the treasury department in unexpected numbers and amounts. For the seven business days of the present month the applications aggregate $2,762,500.

Gov. Dole to Retire.

Honolulu, Sept. 10.—Gov. Dole Wednesday said that he would not resign his office, but would retire at the end of his term, which expires in May next. Gov. Dole is anxious to resume the practice of law.

FAMILY BOOKKEEPING.

One Husband Who Discourages His Better Half in Trying to Keep Accounts.

Most persons know so many competent business women that it will not do to take too seriously the popular slander that the better half of the race cannot master the principles of bookkeeping. Still there is occasionally a joke of this kind good enough to stand with apologies, and a recent one from the Chicago Post will not be taken amiss.

"My account book," she said, proudly, "showed that I had eight dollars and fifteen cents more than I really did have, so I felt at liberty to spend the excess."

"But there wasn't any excess!" he protested.

"Oh, yes, there was!" she replied. "The book showed it."

"If you didn't have the money," he urged, "it was a shortage."

"Certainly not," she returned. "It was right there on the book—eight dollars and fifteen cents more than I had, and when the balance was so much bigger than it should be, I felt free to spend the money."

"If you had more money in your purse than the book showed," he suggested, "what then?"

"I should have spent it," she answered. "Either way, it's all the same."

Now he is trying to get her to give up keeping accounts.

An Old Soldier's Experience.

Dennard, Ark., Sept. 7th.—Mr. E. J. Hicks, merchant of this place, has written for publication, an account of a personal experience, which is very interesting.

"I am an old Federal Soldier," writes Mr. Hicks, "and shortly after the close of the war I was taken sick. I had aches and pains all over me, fluttering of the heart and stomach trouble. I just simply was never a moment without pain. I could not sleep at night, and I was always tired and fearfully weak."

"I took medicine all the time, but for a long time I was more dead than alive. Altogether I suffered for over twenty years, and I believe I would have been suffering yet, or in my grave, if I had not read of Dole's Kidney Pills."

"I got an Almanac, which told me of this remedy, and I bought some of it. I started with three pills a day, but increased the dose to six pills a day. I had not used many till my pains began to disappear. I kept on, and now I can sleep and eat as well as ever I could, and I feel like a new man, with no pains or aches left."

"I will always recommend Dole's Kidney Pills, for they are a wonderful remedy."

"He's comparatively rich, isn't he?" "I should say rather that he is relatively so. He has a nice little place upon whom he bases his hopes."—Philadelphia Press.

CONSUMPTION

THE ITALIAN VESSELS.

Held in Readiness to Be Sent to Turkish Waters.

Rumored That the French Ambassador at Constantinople Intends to Resign Owing to the Apathy of His Government.

London, Sept. 9.—Everything seems to point to new and terrible developments in Macedonia. On top of the appalling accounts of the results of the Turkish methods of "restoring order" in the vilayet of Monastir comes the threat by the insurgents to resort to reprisals on the same scale. The port's anxiety to suppress news by expelling newspaper correspondents from the area of the operations is held to have but one meaning. Wednesday morning's papers comment upon the significance of the news that Russia and Austria are seeking to persuade the powers to coerce Bulgaria as showing a belief that war is inevitable.

A dispatch to the Standard from Constantinople dated Sunday says: "The Turks are much disturbed by the presence of the American warships at Beirut, which arrived there Friday by order of the United States government, and are making every effort to have them recalled. In spite of all assertions that the United States only intends to be there for the simple protection of the rights of her citizens, it is quite possible that the dispatch of the warship may initiate action leading much further."

Beirut, Sept. 10.—Adm. Cotton is on the alert. Signal men and a guard slept at the United States consulate Tuesday night. The men on board the warships are under arms and ready to disembark on a signal from the consulate.

The crews of the Brooklyn and the San Francisco have reconnoitered the coast below the property of the American mission in order to select landing places in case of need.

The Sofia correspondent of the Morning Leader says by the end of the week the insurgents will have received a large accession of weapons. Thirty thousand rifles are being smuggled in to them from all sides, and when these have been received the real fighting will begin.

London, Sept. 10.—Except that the consuls in Salonica are again asking for the protection of warships, there was little direct news Thursday morning from the seat of the Macedonian troubles, but there is a plentiful crop of startling statements impossible either to confirm or to deny. Among the latter is the assertion made in a Sofia dispatch to the Secolo, of Milan, to the effect that it has been decided to mobilize the Bulgarian army. This is contrary to the avowed policy of the Bulgarian government, but can not be regarded as unlikely with Turkish troops concentrated at Goektepe, five miles from the Bulgarian frontier.

In Paris there is a persistent rumor that M. Constans, French ambassador at Constantinople, intends to resign as a protest against the apathy shown by his government.

According to a Sofia dispatch to the Daily Express the British agent there has already advised Bulgaria that Great Britain insists that she prevent the passage of bands into Macedonia.

Count Golouchowski, the Austrian chancellor, had a long conference with Emperor Francis Joseph at Buda Pest Wednesday, and commenced diplomatic action by the powers against Bulgaria is again said to be in preparation.

The Italian fleet is held in readiness at Sicily, so that it could reach Turkish waters within 48 hours, but Italy will not take any action except in accordance with the powers.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Varna reiterates the determination on the part of the Bulgarian government to hinder every manifestation likely to lead to war. He adds that Prince Ferdinand is in daily receipt of menacing letters, and as a result the palace is strongly guarded.

It is learned from Philippopolis that the Macedonian committee is actively organizing new revolutionary bands of which 170 have been formed in Eastern Roumania and Macedonia since Boris Sarafoff assumed the direction of the Adrianople committee. The leaders of the bands during the last six months have imported 190 kilograms of dynamite, mostly from Austria, together with large stores of rifles, which have all been warehoused in the suburbs of Philippopolis.

From Vienna it is reported that Bulgaria is trying to contract in Hungary for 15,000,000 Mannlicher cartridges.

Escaped Convict Came Back.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 10.—Brooks Storey, the noted express robber, has returned to the Mississippi penitentiary, after an absence without leave of several days. Storey said he heard that his wife was dangerously ill and left without asking permission, knowing that it would be refused. This is the fifth time that Storey has taken French leave and voluntarily returned.

New President of Peru.

Lima, Sept. 9.—Senor Candamo was installed as president of the republic. The house of congress, in which the function took place, and also the adjacent states, were thronged with people who raised enthusiastic "vivas" for the new president.

United States Attorneys Promoted.

Washington, Sept. 9.—E. P. Moultrie, second assistant United States attorney at Cincinnati, has been promoted to be first assistant and Thomas H. Darby, of Cincinnati, has been appointed second assistant.

SMUGGLED TOBACCO.

Alleged New York Merchants Are Engaged in Illicit Traffic.

New York, Sept. 10.—The examination of Joseph Wahrman, dealer in leaf tobacco, Wednesday before United States Commissioner Ridgeway on a charge of buying smuggled tobacco, brought out the fact, if the confessions of two sailors arrested Monday are to be believed, that there are a number of tobacco merchants in New York engaged in illicit traffic in tobacco.

For many months the treasury agents have been investigating what they felt assured was a well laid conspiracy to smuggle into New York Sumatra leaf tobacco, used for wrapper on expensive cigars and bearing a very high rate of duty. It can be purchased in Holland for 80 cents a pound and easily disposed of in the United States for $2.50 per pound. Much of it is smuggled, it is declared, from the Netherlands by sailors, particularly the men in the stoker room and the federal officers have been unable to get their hands on the receivers or purchasers.

CONTRACT LABOR LAW.

A Frenchman Arrested Charged With Violating Its Provisions.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 10.—The contract labor law was invoked by the striking lacemakers again Wednesday when Adolph Choquenoy was arrested by United States officers charged with violation of its provisions. Choquenoy was taken into custody at the lace mill of the American Textile Co., where a strike has been on for five months. He came to work here two or three weeks ago, it is alleged, from France, and under contract. A few weeks ago a lacemaker named Forrend was detained at Ellis island by the New York immigration authorities, while on his way from France to work in the local lace mill. On appeal to Washington he was released on the ground that he previously had been employed here. So far as known Choquenoy has never been here before.

DIED FROM NERVOUS SHOCK.

Mrs. Janie Stewart Boyesen Wrongfully Accused of Theft.

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Janie Stewart Boyesen, of Chicago, died Wednesday night at Asheville as a result of nervous shock following accusations of theft. While Mrs. Boyesen was at a hotel near Spartanburg, S. C., the room of a guest from Augusta, Ga., was robbed of $600 worth of jewelry. The landlord accused Mrs. Boyesen. She was not in good health and the charge resulted in her physical collapse. Before the end she instituted a $50,000 damage suit against her accuser in the federal court at Charleston. Mrs. Boyesen had done considerable newspaper work and was a musician of marked ability. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Chicago Women's club and other organizations.

IN THE FEUD DISTRICTS.

Itinerary of the Salvation Army Party Which Leaves Cleveland Sunday.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 10.—The following is the itinerary of the members of the Salvation army who go south Sunday to try to bring about a condition of things in the "feud district" that will put an end to the outbreaks which occur from time to time: Jackson, Ky., September 15 and 16; Saylerville, Magoffin county, September 17; Prestonberg, Floyd county, September 18; Pikeville, Pike county, September 19 and 20; Hindman, Knott county, September 21; Hazard, Perry county, September 22; Whitesburg, Letcher county, September 23; Wise Court House, September 24; Norton, Va., September 25; Bristol, Tenn., September 26 and 27; Knoxville, Tenn., September 28 and 29.

THE SHAMROCK'S SKIPPER.

Capt. Robert Wringe Will Make This Country His Home.

New York, Sept. 10.—Capt. Robert Wringe, who sailed the Shamrock III. in her races against the Reliance for the America's cup, Wednesday announced that he had decided to make this country his home in the future and to become a citizen as soon as the law allows. As a result of this Sir Thomas Lipton may feel obliged to modify his recent statement that he will challenge again provided he can find a designer. Besides a designer he will now have to find a suitable skipper, if he still holds to the opinion that Capt. Wringe is the best handler of big single stickers on the other side.

Airship Again Disabled.

Widewater, Va., Sept. 10.—Prof. Langley's airship was disabled again Wednesday afternoon by the wrecking of the starboard propeller which broke under pressure of its own velocity about the middle, one of the blades dashing against the frame work and doing considerable damage.

To Meet in Baltimore.

Boston, Sept. 10.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, it was voted to hold the 22d international Christian Endeavor in Baltimore July 5 to 10, 1905.

Prisoners Drenched By Rain.

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 10.—Oklahoma experienced a heavy rainfall. A tornado passed above Guthrie. The roof of the federal jail was blown off and the 140 prisoners were drenched by the down pour.

STRANGE ACCIDENT.

Rubber Tire of an Auto Exploded During a Race.

One Man, a Spectator, Was Killed—Barney Oldfield, the Driver of the Machine and Well-Known, Was Badly Injured.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 10.—While Barney Oldfield's racing automobile was running nearly 60 miles an hour at the Grosse Pointe track Wednesday afternoon in the ten mile open event, one of the front tires on the machine burned through and exploded, throwing the car into the fence and injuring Frank Shearer, a spectator, so severely that he died in an ambulance. The car went 50 feet through the air, but Oldfield, who kept his seat, escaped with several cuts about the body and one broken rib.

Oldfield's sparker gave out a few feet from the tape in the race during which the accident occurred, and Oldfield lost nearly two miles before he repaired the damage and started after Harry Cunningham, the only other entry. The tires of the machine were the same ones Oldfield used at Cleveland, and as he was turning into the stretch on his seventh mile the friction on the upper front tire burned through and it exploded.

The track is banked high at the turn and the car, with its tremendous momentum, shot for the outer edge of the track which is six feet above the ground. Oldfield had just time to twist his break and head for a spot between two trees. Shearer was standing against the fence at this point and the car struck him squarely, breaking both legs in several places and fracturing his skull. He was thrown 75 feet and never recovered consciousness. Oldfield threw himself backward on the flat deck of the car, which went crashing through a low tree and landed, a wreck, 50 feet from where it went through the fence.

In the five miles, open event, which Sincholle won with ease, Harry Cunningham lost a tire as he turned off the back stretch. His machine rubbed the inside fence but did not upset, and Cunningham steered it across and off the track, down a road which was near. One wheel of the car was smashed.

Henri Page lost a front tire in the ten mile handicap, but checked his machine before it struck the fence and escaped without injury, although two wheels on his car were wrecked.

A PUGILIST DEAD.

He Expired a Few Hours After a Bout in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Joseph Riley, a bantam weight pugilist, died shortly after midnight at St. Agnes' hospital. Riley Wednesday night engaged in a six-round bout with Grif Jones at the Southern Athletic club. The fight ended in a draw and Riley seemed in good condition at the conclusion of the fight, but shortly after reaching his dressing room he fell to the floor unconscious and was removed to St. Agnes' hospital. He never thereafter regained consciousness. Grif Jones, William Hohl, the proprietor of the club, and the several seconds of the two men in the bout are under arrest.

NEW YORK BUILDING TIEUP.

The Stone Cutters Agree to Sign the Arbitration Plan.

New York, Sept. 10.—The Journeymen Stonecutters' association, of New York and vicinity, one of the unions affected by the building tieup in this city, which have not signed the amended plan of arbitration with the bosses, met Wednesday night and unanimously voted to sign the arbitration plan. This action leaves "Sam" Parks and his union practically alone in the field against the bosses in the big building tieup.

MEXICAN GOLD REGIONS.

Mexico Will Soon Be One of the Greatest Producers in the World.

Mexico City, Sept. 10.—British experts familiar from long experience with the South African gold regions, who have visited the recently discovered gold fields in the districts of Mexico and Michoacan, assert, after a careful examination, that there is no comparison between them and the fields of South Africa and that Mexico will soon be one of the greatest producers of the yellow metal in the world.

Seth Low For Mayor.

New York, Sept. 10.—At the fusion conference Wednesday night the name of Seth Low was endorsed as the candidate for mayor to be presented at the fusionist convention by all the bodies affiliated with the fusion movement except two, the Kings county democracy and the Greater New York democracy.

Rr. Adm. Sumner to Retire.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Rr. Adm. Sumner, commander-in-chief of the South Atlantic station, Wednesday hauled down his flag and will return to the United States. He retires in December. Rr. Adm. Lamberton succeeds him.

Secretary Moody Is Angry.

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 10.—Secretary of the Navy Moody is displeased with the report that he intends to resign from the cabinet. The stories have been printed without foundation, the secretary says.

THE New York World

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World was a brilliant success in the beginning, and has steadily grown ever since. Time is test of all things, and has set its seal of approval on the Thrice-a-Week World, which is widely circulated in every State and Territory of the Union, and wherever there are people who can read our mother tongue.

This paper for the coming winter and the year 1903, will make its news service, if possible, more extensive than ever. All events of importance, no matter where they happen, are reported accurately and promptly.

The subscriber for only one dollar a year, gets three papers every week and more general reading than most great dailies can furnish at five or six times the price.

The Thrice-a-Week World is absolutely fair in its political news. Partisan bias is never allowed to affect its news columns, and Democrat and Republican alike can obtain in its pages truthful accounts of all the great political campaigns.

In addition to all the news, the Thrice-a-Week World furnishes the best serial fiction, elaborate market report and other features of interest.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Bourbon News together one year for $2.75.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

CHOLERA CURE

FOR HOGS AND POULTRY.

Farmers, you need no longer fear to raise and feed Hogs. We not only claim to cure Chelera, but we guarantee to prevent any such disease from breaking out among your Hogs or Poultry, if our remedy is used as directed. It is also fine for Brood Sows before farrowing, being a good blood medicine, which places them in a healthy condition. You cannot afford to be without this remedy if you expect to raise and feed Hogs, as you will more than make the price of the medicine in the extra gain in your hogs, and then you can rest assured they will have no disease. If they do we will refund the money. Write for testimonials.

LIVE STOCK, CROP, ETC.

—Earl Ferguson sold 25 horses Monday at from $28 to $65.

—Wm. W. Gay & Co., of Clark county, sold 448 cattle at from $4.40 to $4.65.

—John Tarr sold Monday, to Jesse Turney, his farm of 120 acres at $120 an acre, cash.

—Mrs. Nannie Pinnell rented her farm of 74 acres to Geo. W. Redmon, at $6.50 per acre.

—The drought continues. Its effects are being felt to a greater or less extent in all parts of the county.

—Robert Meteer sold to Claude Spears 50 tons of baled hay at $18 per ton, delivered at Hutchison.

—McIntyre & McClintock have shipped 15,000 sheep this season, about 7,000 being shipped from Millersburg.

—W. M. Layson sold to Jack Sullivan, 25 head 1,450-lb. steers, at $4.75, to Mr. Shanklin, 18 1,400-lb. at same price, to Mr. Kemper 20 1,435-lb. at same price.

—There is a general complaint of a scarcity of turkeys, not only locally, but in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and other States. This will make prices high for Thanksgiving.

—Francis Trevelyan, the Eastern racing critic, tosses the following bouquet at "Wood" Clay, the young Kentucky turfman, who is racing his horses in the East this season for the first time:

"Among owners, Woodford Clay has flashed to the front almost as suddenly as Higgins among the jockeys. There is no question that in Flying Ship the young Kentuckian has a three-year-old filly of very high class—quite possibly as good a mare as has been seen in years."

"Before the Saratoga meeting opened Mr. Clay said to me: 'I think I have a good filly. I don't know for certain till I have tried her on here, but I think that she will hold her own.'"

"This was a truly modest way to advance the claims of one that has already proved herself so good as the daughter of Flying Dutchman. Her race recently, seven furlongs in 1.25 3-5, with 119 pounds up, was a grand performance, especially as she was running right into the teeth of a quite respectable breeze."

"And in Lady Amelia Mr. Clay evidently has a filly of some quality. Of course, in the Dash Stakes she did not in any sense prove herself, for she was carrying but little weight, but she did all that was asked of her handsomely and brought off a brace of victories for her owner. It must not be forgotten also that she showed a rare turn of speed in the Futurity, when the going did not suit her, and made her tire."

"Mr. Clay's success is particularly pleasing in that these days we see too little of the old Kentucky families as active proprietors of racing stock. They are even falling out to a great extent as breeders, and young Mr. Clay represents a name that is very welcome on the turf."

CAUTION.—Beer put up in dark colored bottles is not always Wiedemann's. See that it has the Crown tin stopper branded "Wiedemann."

HAVE you seen those ladies' Oxfords hat have just arrived at Thomson's?

—Rev. "Uncle" Joe Hopper, Dr. E. H. Rutherford and Rev. A. D. Tadlock will begin a protracted meeting at Glen Kenney (Houston school house,) on Sunday, Sept. 20th.

—Cynthiana will hardly recover from entertaining the Kentucky conference before the Southern Presbyterian synod will demand its attention. The body meets there next Sunday.

—There will be a Christian Endeavor Social in the parlors of the Christian church, Friday evening at 8 o'clock. All the Endeavorers are expected to be present and their friends are cordially invited to be present. Admission free.

Handsomely Equipped.

In the last issue of THE NEWS, mention was made of the arrival of the cars for the interurban road between here and Lexington. The cars are said to be the best that could be procured. Each car is of a modern type, 43 feet long, and will seat about fifty passengers. The seats face front and are the same style as those in the Georgetown cars. Electric push buttons at each seat will enable passengers to signal the conductors for stops. There is a running basket shelf for luggage, straps and other conveniences. The car is wired for seventeen incandescent lights and is equipped with air brakes and general electric motors. Gates are provided for the platform and steps reach the vestibules on both sides at each end. The cars are painted a standard green, highly polished, and have in conspicuous gold leaf letters on each side the words "Georgetown-Lexington-Paris."

THE KING.—Knox is the King of all batters.

J. W. DAVIS & CO.

Will of John W. Harmon.

The will of John W. Harmon was probated on Wednesday. It reads:

1.—"I direct all payments of my debts."

2.—"I give, devise and bequeath to my beloved wife, Jeannie B. Harmon, and during her natural life, all of my property, real, personal and mixed, to have, use, enjoy and control the same as she may desire, but with no power to sell or convey the real estate, and after her death I give, devise and bequeath all of said property to our daughter, Mrs. Florence May Turner, and the heirs of her body."

The following codicil was attached to the will.

"Since making and publishing my last will and testament, I have decided to change the same as set forth in the following codicil—to-wit:

1.—"I hereby revoke and annul all of the provisions of the second paragraph of said will and in lieu thereof, I do hereby give, devise and bequeath to my beloved wife, Jeannie B. Harmon, absolutely and in fee simple, all of my property of every description whatsoever, real, personal and mixed, with full power to give, sell or dispose of the same in any manner she may desire."

The will bears date of April, 1893.

ELEGANT
Are the New Fall Modes
FOR WOMEN.

The more we urge you to come and see the new creations in the more enthusiastic we become. The styles are so varied and there are so many new materials and effects that the finding of a style particularly suited for every individual figure is a very simple matter.

Tailor-Made Suits,

It is no wonder that the fashionable dressers of to-day are depending more and more upon the leading style stores for their clever things in preference to the individual designers.

It Stands to Reason that the opportunity of selecting from the cleverest ideas brought out by several hundred celebrated designers is better than accepting the styles offered by one.

Besides, in buying a fine costume you must not overlook the advantages of being able to try on any number of effects. It enables you to select the one most becoming to you, which is often very different from what you thought you would like—and just think of the difference in the cost. We show some of the most exclusive things in high grade costumes at $17.50, $20, $25 and on up to $50.

The women of Paris who like to see what is newest and best, are respectfully asked to let that be a sufficient reason for an early visit to the big Department Store of KAUFMAN, STRAUS & CO. Wander where you will about the store; you'll be unhindered and not asked to buy. But if you want to buy, you'll find prompt, interested efficient treatment.

ADORATION.

Don't you know, dear, I adore you
Just as I used to do;
Blue skies and rainbows o'er you,
Blossoms begemmed with dew,
Shaded cool paths before you,
Shrubs where the birds sing, too.
Don't you know, dear, I adore you
Just as I used to do?

In the dear days gone by, dear,
In the dear days of June,
Didn't our hopes soar high, dear?
Didn't the love birds croon?
Well, do you know, my own dear,
Still I can catch their tune?
Sitting here all alone, dear,
Still does my life seem June.

Sitting here all alone, dear,
Thinking of then and you;
Days that we both have known, dear,
Branches a-drip with dew,
Branches a-drip with dew, dear,
Rouge where the love birds croon,
Like all the years with you, dear,
Seems a long honeymoon.

Still as my locks grow whiter,
Still is my thought of you;
Days but make hearts grow lighter,
Hearts that are lead and true;
Still have we nearer grown, dear,
Still do I walk with you,
Never, ah, never alone, dear,
Out 'neath the blooms and dew.

A Daughter of the Sioux

By GEN. CHARLES KING.

Copyright, 1902, by The Hobart Company.

CHAPTER XXII.

In the whirl and excitement following the startling outcry from the flats, all Fort Frayne was speedily involved. The guard came rushing through the night, Corporal Shannon stumbling over a prostrate form—the sentry on Number Six, gagged and bound. The steward shouted from the hospital porch that Eagle Wing, the prisoner patient, had escaped through the rear window, despite its height above the sloping ground. A little ladder, borrowed from the quartermaster's corral, was found a moment later. An Indian pony, saddled Sioux fashion, was caught running, riderless, toward the trader's back gate his horsehair bridle torn half way from his shaggy head. Sergeant Crabb, waiting for no orders from the major, no sooner heard that Moreau was gone than he rushed his stable guard to the saddleroom, and in 15 minutes had, not only his own squad, but half a dozen "casual" troopers circling the post in search of the trail, and in less than half an hour was hot in chase of two fleeing horsemen, dimly seen ahead through the starlight, across the snowy wastes. That snowfall was the Sioux's undoing. Without it the trail would have been invisible at night. With it, the pursued were well-nigh hopeless from the start. Precious time had been lost in circling far out south of the post before making for the ford whither Crabb's instinct sent him at once to the end that he and two of his fellows ploughed through the foaming waters barely 500 yards behind the chase and as they rode vehemently onward through the starlight, straining every nerve, they heard nothing of the happenings about the Foster's doorway, where by this time post commander, post surgeon, post quartermaster and acting post adjutant, post ordnance, quartermaster and commissary sergeants, many of the post guard and most of the post laundresses had gathered—some silent, anxious and bewildered, some excitedly babbling; while, within the sergeant's domicile, Esther Dade, very pale and somewhat out of breath, was trying with quiet self-possession to answer the myriad questions poured at her, while Dr. Waller was ministering to the dazed and moaning sentry, and in an adjoining tenement, a little group had gathered about an unconscious form. Some one had sent for Mrs. Hay, who was silently, tearfully chafing the limp and almost lifeless hands of a girl in Indian garb. The cloak and skirts of civilization had been found beneath the window of the deserted room, and were exhibited as a means of bringing to his senses a much bewildered major, whose first words on entering the hut gave rise to wonderment in the eyes of most of his hearers, and to an impulsive reply from the lips of Mrs. Hay.

"I warned the general that girl would play us some Indian trick, but he ordered her release," said Flint, and with wrathful emphasis came the answer.

"The general warned you this girl would play you a trick, and, thanks to no one but you, she's done it!"

Then rising and stepping aside, the long-suffering woman revealed the pale, senseless face—not of the little Indian maid, her shrinking charge and guest—but of the niece she loved and had lived and lied for many and trying years—Nanette La Fleur, a long-lost sister's only child. So Blake knew what he was talking about that when November morning among the pines at Bear Cliff. He had unearthed an almost forgotten legend of old Fort Laramie.

"Who could have done this?" asked Flint. It was inconceivable to Dr. Waller's mind that any one of the soldiery could have been tempted to such perfidy for an Indian's sake. There was not at the moment an Indian scout or soldier at the post, or an Indian warrior, not a prisoner, unaccounted for. There had been half-breeds hanging about the store prior to the final escapade of Pete and Crapaud, but these had realized their unpopularity after the battle on the Elk, and had departed for other climes. Crapaud was still under guard. Pete was still at large, perchance, with Stabber's braves. There was not another man about the trader's place whom Flint or others could suspect. Yet the sergeant of the guard, searching cautiously with his lantern about the post of Number Six, had come upon some suggestive signs. The snow was trampled and bloody about the place where the soldier fell, and there were here and there the tracks of moccasined feet—those of a young woman or child going at speed toward the hospital, running probably, and followed close by a moccasined man. Then those of the man alone, went sprinting down the bluff southeastward over the flats some distance south of the Foster's doorway and up the opposite bluff, to a point where four ponies, shoeless, had been luddled for as much, perhaps, as half an hour. Then all four had come scampering down close together into the space below the hospital, not 50 yards from where the sentry fell, and the moccasined feet of a man and woman had scurried down the bluff from the hospital window, to meet them west of Foster's shanty. Then there had been confusion—trouble of some kind. One pony, pursued a short distance, had broken away; the others had gone pounding out southeastward up the slope and out over the uplands, then down again; in wide sweep, through the valley of the Little rivulet and along the low bench southwest of the fort, crossing the Rock Springs road and striking, further on, diagonally, the Rawlins trail, where Crabb and his fellows had found it, and followed.

But all this took hours of time, and meanwhile, only half revived, Nanette had been gently, pityingly borne away to a sorrowing woman's home, for at last it was found, through the thick and lustrous hair, that she, too, had been struck a harsh and cruel blow; that one reason, probably, why she had been able to oppose no stouter resistance to so slender a girl as Esther Dade was that she was already half dazed through the stroke of some blunt, heavy weapon, wielded probably by him she was risking all to save.

Meantime the major had been pursuing his investigations. Schmidt, the soldier sentry in front of Moreau's door, a simple-hearted Teton of irreproachable character, tearfully protested against his incarceration. He had obeyed his orders to the letter. The major himself had brought the lady to the hospital and showed her in. The door that had been open, permitting the sentry constant sight of the prisoner, had been closed by the commanding officer himself. Therefore, it was not for him, a private soldier, to presume to reopen it. The major said to the lady he would return for her soon after ten, and the lady smilingly (Schmidt did not say how smilingly—how bewitchingly smilingly, but the major needed no reminder) thanked him, and said, by that time she would be ready. In a few minutes she came out, saying (doubtless with the same bewitching smile) she would have to run over home for something, and she was gone nearly half an hour, and all that time the door was open, the prisoner on the bed in his blankets, the lamp brightly burning. It was near tattoo when she returned, with some things under her cloak, and she was breathing quick and seemed hurried and shut the door after thanking him, and he saw no more of her for 15 minutes, when the door opened and out she came, the same cloak around her, yet she looked different, somehow, and must have tiptoed, for he didn't hear her heels as he had before. She didn't seem quite so tall, either, and that was all, for he never knew anything more about it till the steward came running to tell of the escape.

So Schmidt could throw but little light upon the situation, save to Flint himself, who did not then see fit to say to anyone that at no time was it covenanted that Miss Flower should be allowed to go and come unattended. In doing so she had deluded some one beside the sentry.

It was late in the night when Number Six regained his senses and could tell his tale, which was even more damaging. Quite early in the evening, so he said—as early as nine o'clock—he was under the hospital corner, listening to the music further up along the bluff. A lady came from the south of the building as though she were going down to Sudstown. Mrs. Foster had gone down not long before, and Hogan, with a lantern, and two officers' ladies. But this one came all alone and spoke to him pleasant-like and said she was so sorry he couldn't be at the dance. She'd been seeing the sick and wounded in hospital, she said, and was going to bring some wine and jellies. If he didn't mind, she'd take the path around the quartermaster's storehouse outside, as she was going to Mr. Hay's, and didn't care to go through by the guardhouse. So Six let her go, as he "had no orders again it" (even though it dawned upon him that this must be the young lady that had been carried off by the Sioux). That made him think a bit, he said, and when she came back with a basket nicely covered with a white napkin, she made him take a big chicken sandwich "Sure I didn't know how to refuse the lady, until she poured me out a big tumbler of wine—wine, she said, she was taking in to Sergt. Briggs and Corporal Turner that was shot at the Elk, and she couldn't bear to see me all alone out there in the cold." But Six said he didn't take the wine. He got six months "blind" once for a similar solecism, and mindful of the major's warning (this was diplomatic), Six swore he had sworn off, and had to refuse the repeated requests of the lady. He suspected her, he said, because she was so persistent. Then she laughed and said good-night and went on to the hospital. What became of the wine she had poured out? (This from the grim and hitherto silent doctor, seated by the bedside.) She must have tossed it out or drunk it herself, perhaps, Six didn't know. Certainly no trace of it could be found in the snow. Then nothing happened for as much as 20 minutes or so, and he was over toward the south end of his post, but facing toward the hospital when she came again down the steps, and this time handed him some cake and told him he was a good soldier not to drink even wine, and asked him what were the lights away across the Platte, and he couldn't see any, and was following her pointing finger and staring, and then all of a sudden he saw a million lights dancing and stars and bombs and that was all he knew till they began talking to him here in hospital. Something had hit him from behind, but he couldn't tell what.

Flint's nerve was failing him, for here was confirmation of the general's theory.

And so it was with hardened and resentful heart that the major sought her on the morrow. The general and the commands as well would soon be coming home. Such Indians as they had not "rounded up" and captured were scattered far and wide. The campaign was over. Now for the disposition of the prisoners. It was to tell Mrs. Hay and Nanette, especially Nanette, why the sentries were re-established about their home that, though he would not place the trader's niece within a garrison cell, he should hold her prisoner beneath the trader's roof to await the action of superior authority on the grievous charges lodged at her door. She was able to be up, said Miss McGrath—not only up, but down—down in the breakfast room, looking blither and more like herself than she had been since she was brought home.

"Say that Maj. Flint desires to see her and Mrs. Hay," said Flint, with majesty of mien, as, followed by two of his officers, he was shown into the trader's parlor.

And presently they came—Mrs. Hay pale and sorrowing; Miss Flower, pale, perhaps, but triumphantly defiant. The one sat and covered her face with her hands as she listened to the major's few words, cold, stern and accusing. The other looked squarely at him, with fearless, glittering eyes.

"You may order what you like so far as I'm concerned," was the utterly reckless answer of the girl. "I don't care what you do now that I know he is safe—free—and that you will never lay hands on him again."

"That's where you are in error, Miss Flower," was the major's calm, cold-blooded, yet rejoicing reply. It was for this, indeed, that he had come. "Ralph Moreau was run down by my men soon after midnight, and he's now behind the bars."

CHAPTER XXIII.

December and bitter cold. The river frozen stiff. The prairie sheeted in unbroken snow. Great log fires roaring in every open fireplace. Great throngs of soldiery about the red-hot barrack stoves, for all the columns were again in winter quarters, and Flint's two companies had "got the route" for home. They were to march on the morrow, escorting as far as Laramie the intractable of Stabber's band, some few of the Indians to go in irons, among them Ralph Moreau, or Eagle Wing, now a notorious character.

"IT'S A LIE! YOU SHALL NOT SAY IT, SIR!" CRIED FIELD.

The general was there at Frayne, with old Black Bill, erstwhile chief inspector of the department, once a subaltern in days long gone by when Laramie was "Ultima Thule" of the plains forts. The general had heard Flint's halting explanation of his laxity in Moreau's case, saying almost as little as his old friend Grant when "interviewed" by those of whom he disapproved. "Black Bill" it was who waxed explosive when once he opened on the major, and showed that amazed New Englander something of the contents of Moreau's Indian kit, including the now famous hunting pouch, all found with Stabber's village. A precious second, as it turned out, was this same Moreau, with more sins to answer for than many a convicted jail bird, and with not one follower left to do him reverence except, perhaps, that lonely girl, self secluded as the Hays. Hay himself, though weak, was beginning to sit up. Dade, Blake and Ray were all once more housed in garrison. Truscott and Billings, with their hardy troopers, had taken temporary station at the post, until the general had decided upon the disposition of the array of surrendered Indians, nearly 300 in number, now confined under strong guard in the quartermaster's corral at the flats, with six "head devils," including Eagle Wing, in the garrison prison.

All the officers, with two exceptions, were again for duty at Frayne. Webb, laid by the heels at Beecher, his feet severely frozen, and Beverly Field, who, recalled from a brief and solemn visit to a far southern home, had reached the post at nightfall of the tenth. There had hardly been allowed him time to uplift a single prayer, to receive a word of consolation from the lips of friends and kindred who loved the honored father, borne to his last resting place. "Come as soon as possible" read the message wired him by Ray, and, though the campaign was over, it was evident that something was amiss, and, with all his sorrow fresh upon him, the lad, sore in body and soul, had hastened to obey.

And it was Ray who received and welcomed him and took him straight way to his own cosy quarters, that Mrs. Ray, and then the Blakes, might add their sympathetic and cordial greeting—ere it came to telling why it was that these, his friends despite that trouble that could not be talked of, were now so earnest in their sympathy—before telling him that his good name had become involved, that there were allegations concerning him which the chief had ordered "pigeon-holed" until he should come to face them. A pity it was that Bill Hay could not have been there, too, but his fever had left him far too weak to leave his room. Only Ray and Blake were present and it was an interview not soon, if ever, to be forgotten.

"I'm no hand at breaking things gently, Field," said Ray, when finally the three were closeted together in the captain's den. "It used to worry Webb that you were seen so often riding with Miss—Miss Flower up to Stabber's village, and, in the light of what has since happened, you will admit that he had reasons. Hear me through," he continued, as Field, sitting bolt upright in the easy chair, essayed to speak. "Neither Capt. Blake nor I believe one word to your dishonor in the matter, but it looks as though you had been made a tool of, and you are by no means the first man. It was to see this fellow, Moreau—Eagle Wing—whom you recognized at the Elk—she was there so frequently—was it not?"

Into Field's pale face there had come a look of infinite distress. For a moment he hesitated, and little beads began to start out on his forehead.

"Capt. Ray," he finally said, "they tell me—I heard it from the driver on the way up from Rock Springs—that Miss Flower is virtually a prisoner, that she had been in league with the Sioux, and yet, until I can see her—can secure my release, from a promise, I have to answer you as I answered you before—I cannot say."

Blake started impatiently and heaved up from his lounging chair, his long legs taking him in three strides to the frost-covered window at the front. Ray sadly shook his dark, curly head.

"You are to see her, Field. The general—bless him for a trump!—wouldn't listen to a word against you in your absence; but that girl has involved everybody—you, her aunt, who has been devoted itself to her, her uncle, who was almost her slave. She deliberately betrayed him into the hands of the Sioux. In fact this red robber and villain, Moreau, is the only creature she hasn't tried to 'work,' and he abandoned her after she had lied, sneaked and stolen for him."

"Capt. Ray!" The cry came from pallid lips, and the young soldier started to his feet, appalled at such accusation.

"Every word of it is true," said Ray. "She joined him after his wounds. She shared his escape from the village at our approach. She was with him when Blake nabbed them at Bear Cliff. She was going with him from here. What manner of girl was that, Field, for you to be mixed up with?"

"He is her half brother!" protested Field, with kindling eyes. "She told me—everything—told me of their childhood together, and—"

"Told you a pack of infernal lies!" burst in Blake, no longer able to contain himself. "Made you a cat's paw; led you even to taking her by night; to see him when she learned the band were to jump for the mountains—used you, by God, as he used her, and, like the Indian she is, she'd turn and stab you now, if you stood in her way or his. Why, Field, that brute's her lover, and she's his—"

"It's a lie! You shall not say it, sir!" cried Field, beside himself with wrath and amazement, as he stood quivering from head to foot, still weak from wounds, fever and distress of mind. But Ray sprang to his side. "Hush, Blake! Hush, Field! Don't speak. What is it, Hogan?" And sharply he turned him to the door, never dreaming what had caused the interruption.

"The general, sir, to see the captain!"

THE FLY.

A fly.
To my eye.
Is a wonderful thing.
He buzzes about all the day on his wing—
A gossamer, flibberty, gibberty thing.
You wouldn't surmise
A thing of his size
Had strength for all of the tasks that he tries.
For instance, to-day
I was reading away
Of fairies and gnomes and the pranks that they play.
When a fly
Came by.
And then he began
On a terrible plan
Of worrying,
Flurrying,
Scurrying in,
And sticking the ends of my nose and my chin.
Until I'd Like to died
With wrath and chagrin.
Now I'm a big thing—
The fly was small.
He'd flop and he'd fling,
He'd buzz and he'd sing,
While I would do nothing at all
But whack at that fly.
Each time he came by,
Deep wrath in my eye,
I never could hit him however I'd try.
I whacked for two hours
With all of my powers;
And when I was done
I sat weary
And teary—
While he was as fresh as when he had begun.

Middle Age Station

"I HAS only recently been dawning upon me what's the matter with me—in hiking along toward middle age," remarked a rotund man of 45 or so, who accomplished a great deal of roaming up and down the world before he dropped anchor and settled down about a decade and a half ago. "I hate to believe it, but it's a fact."

"The other afternoon I went into a store to buy a hat."

"Show me some straws," I said to the salesman.

"The salesman brought out a lot of those narrow-brimmed, soft, high-crowned straw hats that the sedate old codgers wear, for comfort more than looks."

"Not that kind," I said, rather impatiently to the salesman—I didn't enjoy the imputation he suggested by fetching out hats of that kind. "Wide-brimmed sailor straws, you know—something stylish—not necessarily jaunty, but—er—stylish and effective."

"The salesman looked at me rather doubtfully."

"Very well," he replied, "but the kind I've shown you are the sort that are most worn by settled men."

"Settled men! Me a settled man! That came as a sort of shock to me, I'm bound to admit."

"Say, how old d'ye think I am—a hundred and fourteen?" I asked the salesman.

"Oh, no," he replied, smiling, "but, you know, those wide-brimmed sailor straws are generally worn by—they're more suitable for the young fellows, y'know."

"I hadn't entirely got into the habit of classing myself as anything else but one of the young fellows, but of course I had to accept the polite salesman's verdict that I was in the foggy class—I can't say that I enjoyed it."

"But that salesman's opinion wasn't the first to nudge me along to the somewhat unpleasant realization that I'm really not one of the young fellows any more. Last winter I went into a shoe store and said, sort of off-hand, to the salesman: 'Show me some shoes, size eight,' and blamed if he didn't look me over and then fetch out four or five square-toed, very sort leather congress gaiters—those shoes with the elastic tabs at the side, you know, that old codgers wear so that they can clip 'em on and off easily. I was foolish enough to depart from that shoe store in a sort of huff, but when I thought it over and cooled off, I perceived that the shoe salesman wasn't really to blame—it was myself that was to blame for getting into the middle-age class and taking on that congress gaiter look! So I went back to the shoe store and bought my shoes there. Congress gaiters? Not much! I bought a pair of buttoned patent leathers—d'ye think I'm going to permit them to naturally force me to be middle-aged by their implications that I have reached that stage?"

"I began to notice, too, awhile back, that a great many of the young fellows, with whom I came into business or social contact—chaps of from 25 to 30—were falling into the habit of calling me 'sir.' I hate to own up how much that distressed me when I noticed it. I knew that I held no exalted station that would entitle me to the 'sir' business from anybody, and then I was reluctantly—great scott! how reluctantly—forced to the conclusion—beyond all doubt the correct conclusion—that the only reason why these fellows of 25 and 30 were addressing me as 'sir' was that they wanted to evince proper respect toward me as a middle-aged man! After 'sirring' me these same fellows would, right in my presence, rollickingly address fellows of their own age by their first names. It makes me feel like one out of the picture—like one dished. I had passed that queerly indefinite line of demarcation between the 'young fellow' and the 'settled man,' without knowing it or appreciating the significance of the change—and then, when I was forced to think it over, the knowledge of it came swooping in upon me like an avalanche—I had reached the middle age and joined the 'settled' crowd all unawares! I'll get used to it in time, no doubt—I'll have to —but it's an uncanny, measly sort of feeling at first. I fell to wondering whether, in my utter unappreciation of the fact that I had attained or was verging upon middle age, I had gone on acting too much the part of the young fellow, thus giving people the chance to criticize me for trying to keep up the bluff that I still possessed the youth that had slipped away from me without my knowing it. The thought of that chagrined me. I hate to see a middle-aged man making the foolish effort to trot along in the young fellow class—there's something humiliating to me in such a spectacle. And so, next summer, I suppose that, after all, I shall have to go one of those straw hats that are devised for the 'settled men,' and after that, mayhap, even the congress gaiters, if only to keep people from poking further fun at me under their impression that I am making frantic efforts to act and look like a young fellow after my genuine youngfellowhood had glided helplessly far behind me."

"But this forced realization of the fact that your youth has gone and that you've been thrust into the middle-aged class, takes a good many wistful little ambitions out of your life. I was a great wanderer over the face of the earth in my young manhood—did a lot of sailing before the mast to out-of-the-way corners of the world when there was no other necessity for it except that I longed to have a good, square look at the world and all parts of it. Well, since I've settled down the thing that the Germans call the 'wander-lust' has often seized me, and I have hankered to be on the move up and down the world again. The fact that I had taken a wife and had a family of children, of course, rendered any such a thing as my yielding to these impulses out of the question, but I always had a sort of hold-out in this connection."

"When I'd take my clothes off I'd get to looking at the tattooed figures on my arms, and fall to dreaming of the strange little corners of the orient that I was running into when I had those tattoo marks made with the youth's pride in such foolish things—and then the old longing to up-anchor and get under steam again would seize me. Whereupon, of course, I'd be brought up with a round turn with the thought of my settled-down condition and my wife and children. But, even then, I'd say to myself: 'Oh, well, I'll see all of those old places again one of these days—I'll have one more good old rattling cruise in the South seas, anyhow, before I'm piped out—plenty of time, plenty of time—I'm young yet.'"

"And I was still giving entertainment to these vague dreams when the realization was forced upon me that I was a middle-aged man, that middle-aged men are not for the wandering game; that the old reckless years had long gone and were worse than hull down on the horizon—and then it was borne in upon me that that little wistful hold-out of mine as to again seeing the strange, out-of-the-way corners of the earth was the merest fantasy—that, as a matter of fact, there wasn't 'plenty of time,' as I had been so fondly imagining—no time for anything except to make up my mind that I was a foggy, and, as a foggy, shelved and settled down for good and all!"

"Middle age has its compensations, you say? Yes. Uh-huh. So I've heard. But give me just one week out of one of those old, wild, untrammelled years, and I'll give you five years of the middle age that's upon me in exchange!"—Washington Star.

HERMIT IN CROWDED CITY.

Resident of Syracuse, N. Y., Has Not Been Downtown in Thirty Years.

A veritable Rip Van Winkle has been discovered in Syracuse, N. Y., who, although living but a short walk from the business center, has not been downtown in 30 years, and has seen none of the new sky scrapers and business blocks which adorn Syracuse. His name is Paul Hesley. He is a well man, and has not taken any vow to thus seclude himself. Moreover, he has possession of all his faculties, is well read and intelligent. A few days ago he was "dug up" by an automobilist and taken for a spin through the city. He has lived here 55 years, and was in lower South Salina street but a very few times during all this time.

The reason Mr. Hesley gives for this strange, secluded life is this: "When I was young I had to work so steadily that I didn't have time to go around and see things, and now that I am old, I don't care much about it." After his trip he said:

"Syracuse is certainly a growing town. This seems like going thousands of miles away from home."

The old man spends all his time clock-making and hoeing in the garden. He is perfectly contented to stay at home. Living almost around the corner from the magnificent new high school which the city has just erected, he never saw the building, either completed or in process of erection, until he took his automobile trip. Another strange feature of the case is that he keeps in touch with the progress of the city by means of the newspapers, but he never has any curiosity to see things for himself.

Especially Forbidden.

Commenting on the fact that the khedive of Egypt, on his recent trip to Europe, rode from Calais to Paris on a locomotive in preference to the special car provided for him, the Frankfurter Zeitung remarks that since Ferdinand of Bulgaria made such a trip from Salzburg to Munich, locomotive rides by royal personages have been officially forbidden on German railways because of the danger of distracting the engineer's attention.

THE FOX IN THE WELL.

Find the Owner of the Well.

An unlucky Fox, having fallen into a Well, was able, by dint of great efforts, just to keep his head above water. While he was there struggling, and sticking his claws into the side of the Well, a Wolf came by and looked in. "What, my dear brother!" said he, with affected concern, "can it really be you that I see down there? How cold you must feel! How long have you been in? How came you to fall in? I am so pained to see you! Do tell me all about it!" "The end of a rope would be of more use to me than all your pity," answered the Fox. "Just help me to set my foot once more on solid ground, and you shall have the whole story."

MORAL.—Pity, indeed, is, of itself, but poor comfort at any time; and unless it produces something more substantial, rather impudently troublesome, than any way agreeable.

CLIMB TO REACH WATER.

Old Angler Tells Story to Prove the Reasoning Power Displayed by Fish.

"Fishes have more sense than they are credited with having," said an old angler, "and my experience has taught me not to put much faith in the statement that they only know things from the vibrations due to concussion. I think they reason in some way or other. I don't know just how it is. I am satisfied that nature has not been particularly extravagant in the matter of giving fish intelligence. Besides, I know that their eyes are 'flat,' and they can see but very little. I suppose the eye of the fish is worse, if anything, than the eye of the reptile. But taking all these things into consideration, I am convinced from little things I have observed that the fish is a pretty wise member, and that he at least knows what is good for him when he is confronted by the blunt issue of surviving or not surviving. Why is it that a fish always flounders toward the water? That's the point I have in mind, and it is the one fact above all others that has convinced me that the fish has more sense than we think. I have never seen a fish that would not flounder toward the water."

"I know two answers will be made to this suggestion. One is that there is generally a slope toward the water, and that hence the force of gravity determines the direction of the motion of the fish's movement. And the other is a primary reason—the matter of instinct, as distinguished from reason. These explanations do not satisfy me. In the first place, I reject the theory which makes a difference between instinct and reason. I cannot tell the difference between the attributes, so much are they alike. In the second place, I want to tell you that I have seen fish floundering up hill. Why? Simply because they were forced to founder up hill in order to get back into the water. Does a fish know anything about direction and distance? I think so. I have seen them jump and flounder up hill, inch after inch, until they got back to the edge of the stream out of which they had been jerked. It may be what some of the writers call 'instinct,' but to save my soul I can't tell 'instinct' from what we are accustomed to regard as reason in higher forms of life."

Red-Tape Absurdities. The Deutsche Juristenzeitung records the following instance of Prussian red tape. A woman who disappeared from her home was legally adjudged dead after a time. Three years later she reappeared, proved her identity beyond a doubt and demanded a passport and other legal documents which Germans are required to possess. The authorities, however, refused to give her the documents, declaring that legally she was dead, and the law courts decided that she could not appeal against the ruling that she was dead, because too great an interval had elapsed for an appeal to be allowable. The courts of appeal upheld this decision, so that the unfortunate woman is still dead, though very much alive to the absurdities of red tape.—London Tit-Bits.

SUNLIGHT AND HUMAN BODY.

Experiments Show That Rays Penetrate Easily Through Quite a Thickness of Flesh.

An article contributed by Dr. J. N. Kime to the Scientific American gives details of some experiments that show that sunlight will penetrate in a comparatively short time through a considerable thickness of flesh. He bound together a small negative and a gelatin-bromide plate and put the combination between the teeth and cheek of the subject, taking suitable precautions that no light should enter at the mouth. The cheek was then exposed to direct sunshine in February for 40 seconds, and in every case the image was developed. One man on whom the experiment was tried had a thick, short, black beard and this lessened the exposure effect somewhat. Another was a negro, with a thick, dark cheek, and here the diminution in the light transmitted was still more marked.

No steps were taken to interfere with the circulation of the blood and Dr. Kime considers that his experiments show that it is not necessary, as has been stated, to compress the parts to free them from blood as far as possible when light is used as a surgical agent. Dr. Kime also states that his experiments show why red light is valuable in the treatment of smallpox. "They prove that no chemical light of any consequence reaches the patient." When red curtains are fixed over the windows, etc., and so irritation is prevented and subsequent disfigurement lessened. But as the photographic plates used were not sensitive to red light the soundness of this deduction from the experimental results may be doubted.

THE ALARM-CLOCK BRAIN.

This Writer Rather Dubious Concerning Veracity of Man Who Claims to Awaken at Will.

To be able to waken one's self at a predetermined and usually unearthly hour without external prompting is an accomplishment of which one may well boast, and of which many do boast. I hope with entire truthfulness. Continually to be doubting other people's word is, perhaps, a bad sign, but I confess that when one of these gifted mortals tells how the tide served for weak-fishing at 3:30 a. m., and the appointment was for 3 sharp at Samson's pier; how he did not want to rouse the whole house with the alarm clock, and how, furthermore, if he had put his whole trust and confidence in the clock it would have been just him to snore through its long-protracted trill, so he simply impressed upon his mind, "two-thirty," because that would give him about time to dress and get down to the dock. "Two-thirty," he said to his mind. "Two-thirty. Understand?" And his mind nodded its head and said: "All right, boss, I'll call you. Don't you worry. Two-thirty," and he went to bed at seven and slept like a top, and it seemed like it was no time at all before he waked up with a sort of a jerk, as broad awake as ever he was in his life. He struck a match and looked at his watch, and what do you think? Well, sir, it was just 2:31. When a man tells me that, I look him right in the eye.—Everybody's Magazine.

Walls and Things.

Still a great wall intervened between them and society.

"Let's give it up," said the man, thoroughly disheartened.

"Oh, we're going to get over it," said the woman, nothing daunted.

"What! have we wings?" expostulated the man.

"No, but our money has," said the woman.—Detroit Free Press.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Miss Muriel Armitage.

Thank Pe-ru-na for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says: "I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peru-na has done for me."

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peru-na, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Peru-na cures catarrh of the pelvic organs with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the head. Peru-na has become renowned as a positive cure for female ailments simply because the ailments are mostly due to catarrh. Catarrh is the cause of the trouble. Peru-na cures the catarrh. The symptoms disappear.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unhealable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured.

Peru-na cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Chinaman's Reprieve.

The editor of the Chinese Daily World, published in this city, is a graduate of Yale, and while retaining all the characteristic reticence of his race he is, nevertheless, rather clever at reprieve, as was recently intimated when a rather dapper young fellow called at the World office to sell a certain grade of paper. The editor affects the American style of dress, and the paper house drummer thought he would be smart and opened the conversation by inquiringly asking: "What kind of a 'fere are you—Japanese or a Chinese?" The editor smiled blandly, and with a courteous bow retorted: "Before I answer your inquiry will you kindly inform me what kind of a key you are, and tell me if you are a monkey, a denkey or a Yankee?" The drummer fled in dismay.—San Francisco Wasp.

Capable.

A very jaunty looking applicant for the position of stenographer and typewriter in the office of a gentleman in public life was told that it would be necessary for her to have a thorough knowledge of grammar. She gave proof of her entire proficiency by saying: "Well, I have always known how to spell, and when it comes to grammar I don't take no back seat for nobody, I don't."

PUBLIC RENTING

—OF—
547½ ACRES
—OF—

Bourbon Land.

As Committee of Geo. G. White, I will rent publicly at the Main Street entrance to the Court-house yard, in Paris, Ky., at 12 o'clock, noon, on Wednesday, September 16th, 1903,

the farm of Mr. Geo. G. White, known as the Gilt Edge Stock Farm, situate on the Paris & North Middletown Turnpike, near Paris, and bounded on the North by said pike and the Paris Distilling Company's property, on the East by Geo. W. Wyatt, on the South by Stoner Creek and on the West by Stoner Creek, the Maysville Railroad and the said Distillery property, and contains by survey 547½ acres, 2 rods and 22 poles of land, NO CREEK INCLUDED IN BOUNDARY, the line along the creek following the creek "as it meanders on the bank at the distance of about 2 poles from the water in said creek."

This is a No. 1 Bluegrass farm. It lies adjacent to the City of Paris, and has on it one of the best farm residences in the county.

It is well watered and has all necessary outbuildings, including a fine large stock barn with box stalls and good training track adjoining barn.

Besides main residence there is a good two-story tenant house on the farm near the distillery property.

I will first offer the tenant house with 5 13-100 acres of land, as shown by survey attached, and then the balance of the farm containing 542½ acres separately, after which I will offer the entire farm as a whole, reserving the right to accept either bid or reject all bids.

There will be about 2½ acres for corn including about 70 acres now in hemp and which lessee may cultivate either in corn or hemp at his option; about 90 to 95 acres for wheat and 15 to 20 acres for oats, and right will be reserved to seed said farm in fall of 1904; and to sow grass at proper time on said wheat and oats land. The balance of said farm is well set in bluegrass.

Said renting is subject to the right of the Paris Distilling Co. to maintain their pumping station near the Railroad bridge, and to deposit offal from their cattle pens in the sinks on said farm in rear of distillery property.

If tenant house is rented separately right of ingress and egress to and from same over balance of farm will also be reserved.

TERMS.—The above lease will commence March 1, 1904, and extend until March 1, 1905, and lessee will be required to execute two negotiable notes well secured, each for one-half of said rental one due in six months and the other in one year from March 1, 1904, and both bearing interest from March 1, 1904, at 6 per cent.

WM. MYALL,
Committee of Geo. G. White.
